at the former
Bright School
260 Grove Street
Waltham, Mass.

Waltham residents are creators of art, innovators of film, and nostalgic
hoarders of photos. While we all want to ensure that we can view and share our beloved pieces for years to come, it can sometimes be difficult to determine how best to care for them. Luckily, the archives community has developed standard tools and practices to help everyone maintain their digital and paper treasures. Join Jennifer Williams and the Waltham Historical Society to learn how to properly label, store, and preserve your personal archives so that they last forever. By the end of the lecture, you will understand the various ways to protect your mementos from deterioration, computer malfunctions, weather-related hazards, and more.

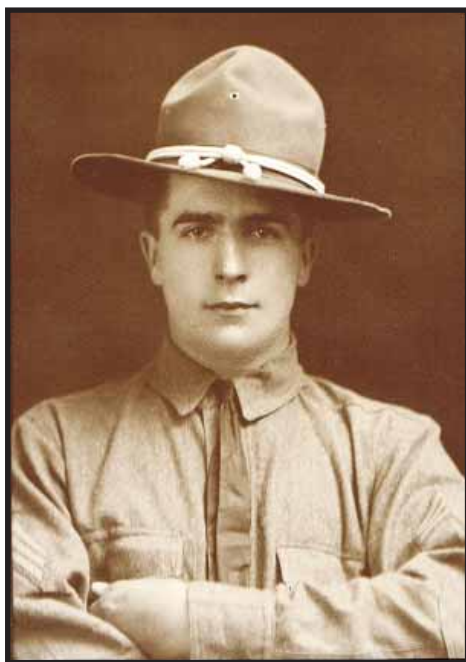

Light refreshments will be available and you're invited to tour the Society's exhibits.

*This event is supported in part by a grant from the Waltham Community Foundation.

Visit the Society's Exhibit Honoring the 100th Anniversary of The Great War

See an Exhibit and Learn the Role of Waltham's Company F in America's 101st Expeditionary Forces During World War I

The exhibit will showcase artifacts from the Brad Bigham Collection.

Francis McGowan

Beginning in July the Historical Society will be opening a new exhibit covering the 100th anniversary of the First World War. With War being declared on April 6, 1917 the American troops didn't immediately travel to the front.

They had been dispatched to El Paso to protect the American border from incursions by the famous Pancho Villa and others. The laws at the time dictated that National Guard forces could not be used to fight outside the Nation's borders and were to be utilized for defensive purposes only.

However, an incursion into Mexico was made by the Army, led by John "Black Jack" Pershing, bringing a strong reaction from all sides of the Mexican conflict.

There is reason to believe that the actions of the American troops in moving into Mexican territory led to a Germans attempt to recruit Mexico as an ally with the promise of aid in recovering territory lost to the United States.

The Zimmerman Note spurred the US President to declare war on Germany on April 6, 1917. American shipping had been targeted by German U-Boats, with many ships being sunk or damaged. Combined with the offer to Mexico, President Wilson believed there was no option but to declare war on Germany.

The Waltham Historical Society has been extremely fortunate to receive a donation of materials from the Collection of Brad Bigham. Brad's sister Mary Martha and his Niece Terry Bigham have been instrumental in helping the Society make accessible the information and material about Waltham's Company F.

Among the items on display will be a helmet with the 101st insignia, a uniform, and numerous awards, medals, and photos taken before, during, and after the War.

You can read letters from the soldiers telling stories of their experiences as well as see photographs taken during the Company's time, both on the Mexican Boarder against Pancho Villa, and in the trenches in Europe.

Brad Bigham spent much of his life collecting, documenting, and writing about the actions of Company F. His father, Edward Bigham was a proud member of the unit, leading Brad to seek out and interview as many surviving members as possible. His articles in the local newspaper on Veterans' Day every year were always very informative and poignant.

The Bigham collection is almost overwhelming in its breadth. Photos in uniform as well as photos taken years later, show such true dedication to purpose that it is only appropriate that it now becomes available for viewing by the public.

The exhibit covers Company F signing up and serving in El Paso, Texas. There are photos taken at Camp Banks showing the men in formation during drilling exercises before shipping to Framingham and then to Europe.

We hope the exhibit will expand continually as more of the Bigham Collection is explored and put on display.

The exhibit also presents photos taken of men on the front steps of the Waltham Public Library on the day they shipped out. Some of these photos provide the identities of the men leaving, while others were not identified. It's hoped that visitors may recognize some of the men and can actually write their names on the images to update our records.

We want to thank Mary Martha Bigham and Terry Bigham for their assistance with the exhibit and for helping identify some of those in the photos.

We would greatly appreciate any contributions to add to the exhibit. Please contact us at:

Waltham.historical.society@gmail.com

If you have materials we can copy and return to you, please help us expand the story.

The exhibit, at the former Bright School, 260 Grove Street in Waltham, will be open on Saturday mornings from 10:00 am to 1:00 pm. Call to learn of other hours or to make an appointment to visit.

We're looking to identify the men in these photos. The photo above is from El Paso and is marked First Corps.

The image on the right shows two members of Company F. It was a gift to Charlie Rennie's brother Alfred and markings on the back seem to indicate the name Frank Gallagher.

If you can identify any of them please contact us through the website.

2017-2019 Board of Directors
Meeting Held at Home of Jeremy Hagger

The Board of Directors for the Waltham Historical Society's 2017-2019 term held their first meeting at the home of Corresponding Secretary Jeremy Hagger on Sunday, June 25th.

Jeremy and Carole served up a feast that had everyone going back for more. And there were some suggestions we hold meetings this way going forward! Thank you Jeremy and Carole!

And thanks as well to the new members of the Board of Directors. Gail Cormier and Rachel Malley bring an enthusiasm for history that will only make our work more enjoyable and successful.

Please consider joining us by volunteering to serve on a committee under the leadership of our Directors. Whether your interest is in filing, researching, documenting, fund-raising, the newsletter, or technology, there's an opportunity for you to help us in our mission. Contact us through the Waltham.historical.society@gmail.com email and let us help you get involved!
